A good first step for Magic players. Fix eldrazi processors u2665u2665u2665u2665ers.. The game is great. I started playing magic long time ago and now I'm back enjoying it. The only problem is that for new players now you can't get enough coins for buying card boosters from old expansions and create nice decks is really hard. I payed like 100u20ac or so but still not close to get 50% of current cards.. Had a 1 hour game and a bug caused me to lose >:(Would Not Recommend. I recently started getting back into magic after being inactive for around 15 years. However, other than standard tournaments, I don't have many opportunities to play against other players, so I figured I needed an online version of magic to practice. Magic duels is OK to get back into the mechanics and see what other people play, but other than that, it's a HUGE disappointment: - Insane grind. buying boosters as a poor kid in the 90ies (p2w in its pure form) was more fun. - Stupid deck restrictions: rares 2x, uncommons 3x (to keep serious players away or p2w low?) - Strange format: not pure standard, balance seems off (banned smuggler's copter still being played, too many cheap removal spells.) - Terrible connectivity: connection losses all the time, dropped players get replaced by AI and most of the time, you have to beat the AI in order to not receive a loss, alt+tab is all it takes to get disconnected, possibly lots of room for exploits. Lags are so hard that often you can't hit the stop button to react to your opponent, which defeats the whole purpose of playing magic. - No possibility to interact with other players: no chat, no trade, nothing. Which might be wise, because. - The duels community equals the bottom of the magic community. You won't find many good matches, real magic fans are probably somewhere else to be found. Often enough, playing a removal spell is all that it takes for your opponent to pull the plug and let the AI take over. which surprisingly often leads to the AI coming back hard and winning a lost match. and then there are these u2665u2665u2665u2665u2665u2665s just waiting everytime as long as the timer allows (playing a land after waiting for 1 minute) to make YOU impatient and disconnect, giving them a default win. - Always playing against the same decks. Right now: red burn, topters, green ramp, sphinx tutelage. boring. - The campaigns are a joke. The way they try to tell stories is just unworthy of the magic universe. It's nothing but still images and written dialouge, combined with a muted 90ies-style render-cutsceene at the end of each campaign. And the stories are just boring. It rather ruins the unvierse for me. - Presentation is rudimentary at best. Graphics are just the cards, a boring table, generic FX like fireballs and lightnings. even tablets could do better. There is only 1 music track playing throughout the whole game and it will drive you insane after the 2nd loop. I honestly can't find a reason to play this other than getting a very blurry first impression of what magic the gathering is and that it's probably best to stay away from it lol. Do yourself a favor and play real magic or Xmage. I honestly can't understand the people giving this a thumps up. Probably the kind of people going to McDonalds when they're hungry and liking everyu2665u2665u2665u2665u2665u2665on facebook.. Fun and potentially free way to play with some of the cards!. The game is great, the app is poor - The animation is pretty time consuming. Even if you turn off all possible animations, there are still some animations left which are really really slow. That is pretty exhausting if you play the whole evening. - It is still pay to win. The story mode gives you the illusion, that there is a possibility to earn enough good cards to create a good deck, but its still an illusion. Even if you spend some money, it will not be enough. You have to spend a lot or your money is wasted. - A booster has only 6 cards for a real price of 1.79u20ac. Thats pretty expensive for a few virtual cards in comparison to a real card booster. The only advantage is, that you cant get cards double. Because of this, it is best to focus on one edition to get at least all good cards from one edition (if you spend tons of money). -The battle interface is poorly designed. If the developers would have spent half the time they took for animations to create a good battle interface, the gameplay experience would be much better -You even have to buy your Avatar from a limited selection. There is no possibility to personalize without paying (except you pay the little coins you get from story mode, but then it is guaranteed that you will loose fights without spending money for boosters) + It is still magic.
